THE WHIPTAIL WALLABY - By Keith Harvey

Where the eucalyptus trees are tall and tower on every side Below the rocky eastern wall that forms the Great Divide

And messmate grows with mountain ash above the ferns and grasses, Through shadowed gullies like a flash the little whiptail passes.

*The head is small and fine as lace, all striped in white and yellow
The bushmen call him pretty race he's such a handsome fellow.*

*His coat is grey as winter skies,
with white on hips and shoulders,
And swift as any bird he flies*

TURN OVER

between the rocks and boulders.

He's very active, small and shy and naturalists salute him And I have often wondered why the 'Sportsmen' want to shoot him.

He quietly roams the bush land wide and harms no other creature, But shooters think to lift his hide is quite a sporting feature.

*So oft his body you find hung over fence and slip rail
A 'sport' must have a weak,
Sick mind to want to kill the whiptail.*
